A FINE SINGER.
The congregation of the First Presbyterian church had a rare treat Sunday in the singing of Mr. Emil Rosen, of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. His rendering of the great tenor aria from Mendelssohn's St. Paul "Thou Faithful Unto Death," was in the style of the best oratorio singers. His singing also of a variety of lovely songs at the Johnson-Sutherland reception delighted his hearers. A fine career seems to lie before this gifted young singer.

HOW THE SLIDE BLOCKED PANAMA CANAL

This photograph, taken October 26, near Gold Hill, pictures vividly the problem confronting the canal officials. Rock and earth have moved down from the heights on either side and forced the mud at the bottom up out of the water. In the foreground is an island which began to form just before the picture was made. It rose and spread until it joined the sides of the canal. The mass in the background, through which a narrow channel had just been blasted, came up first as an island and grew until it blocked the entire canal at this point. Shortly before this picture was made, a big blast had been shot off in the center and the water can be seen rushing through.

HANUKKAH

Jewish Feast of Dedication Begins December 2 and Lasts For Eight Days.

Hanukkah, the Jewish Feast of Dedication, begins December 2 and extends over a period of eight days. The account of its origin is set forth in the Books of the Maccabees. The Syrian king, Antiochus Epiphanes, had determined to unify all the peoples of his kingdom. To accomplish this he believed it necessary to compel all to adopt a common religion. The Jews were his political subjects. Their monotheism and distinctive religious practices based upon the Bible were in sharp contrast to his religion, a form of paganism originally imported from Greece. "Judaism must be destroyed," became the watchword of the Syrian court. In 168 B. C. the royal command went forth that shrines and altars be erected for idol worship. Jewish rites and practices wherever found were destroyed. Direct persecutions were visited upon the faithful. As a climax in the campaign to extinguish the Jewish faith, the altar in the temple at Jerusalem was profaned. Syrian soldiers offered up sacrifices to Zeus Olympus. These drastic measures aroused the Jews to revolt. Judas Maccabeus was appointed leader by his father Mattathias. After three years of successful warfare against the Syrians, Judas was in a position to dedicate a new altar at Jerusalem, the festivities in connection with the dedication lasting eight days. To commemorate this event, "Judas and his brethren and the whole congregation of Israel ordained that the dedication of the altar should be kept up in their seasons from year to year by the space of eight days from the 25th day of Kislew with gladness and joy." This festival is also known as the "Feast of Lights," probably because burning lamps and torches in the ancient temple and home were used to celebrate.

The distinctive ceremonial feature of this festival today is the kindling of lights in the home and in the synagogue; one on the first evening, the number being increased by one on each consecutive evening of the festival. Special prayers inspired by the historic event commemorating the triumph of monotheism over heathenism, of the forces of light over the forces of darkness are recited. Special scriptural portions are read in the synagogue. The festival does not call for cessation from labor and is therefore regarded as one of the two minor feasts in the Jewish calendar. In modern times children's festivals, in which the story and significance of the feast are recounted, have become a marked feature in the celebration of the Feast of Dedication.

RAILROAD MEN

Take To Marine Corps—Many Are Enlisted—Good Recruits.

Washington, November 27.—Eight hundred and thirteen railroaders, including brakemen; conductors, engineers, firemen and switchmen, have enlisted in the United States Marine Corps during the fiscal years of 1913, 1914 and 1915, according to the triennial statement of recruiting just made public.

During the occupation of Vera Cruz by American marines in April, 1914, war correspondents were amazed at the efficiency shown by our sea soldiers in repairing and operating the line outside the city that had been torn up by the Mexicans, but the answer is found in that fact that almost one out of ten marines is a railroader.

But be that as it may, Uncle Sam would like to know why the railroader seeks service with the oldest and smallest branch of his military arm. It has been suggested that the men who follow the rail are naturally adventurous, seeking excitement and danger, and it is believed that the marine's service on both land and sea satisfies that craving.

APING THE ENGLISH.

Washington, November 27.—Major General Commandant George Barnett, of the United States Marine Corps, has sanctioned the carrying of swagger sticks by marines when ashore in uniform, or out of garrison. The idea is borrowed from Cousin "Tommy Atkins," of the British army, and it is thought that the carrying of the sticks will add distinction to the marines' already attractive uniform. The swagger sticks are made from various kinds of wood and are usually twenty-four to twenty-six inches long. Chinese bullets are sometimes used for ferrules and foreign coins for the heads.

The marine is a much traveled man and is quick to pick up any ideas of foreign services which will add in any way to his already very natty military appearance.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

It has been said that "God must have had a sense of humor, or he never would have made the world so large that no man could see the back of the other's hand."

Arrangements are now being made for next summer's national political conventions. The location will probably be decided on the basis of the most liberal offers made by hotels and others for accommodations of delegates.

It looks as if Congress might this winter learn about some of the defects of our army and navy, concerning which the governments of Europe were fully informed years ago.

The man who first started the idea of selling 1916 automobile models in 1915 is perhaps the same one who first issued Christmas magazines at Thanksgiving time.

These conventions always are held in an orator needs leather lungs to attempt to tolerate a stampede of length of time by which their candidate. As the loud hollers can be hired for 25 cents a measure of the fitness or merit of a candidate.

These conventions always are held in a room sufficed and alternates, with newspaper reporters. A great statecraft and national policy into a beer garden. But the old habits in our political habits, and the old habits in our political habits, and the old habits in our political habits.

CITY HELPS COUNTRY SAVE CITY.

"What are you doing out in the backwoods?" asked a city pastor of a country preacher. "I am helping you save your city," answered the rural minister. He spoke truly. Rural prosperity produces urban success, and it has been demonstrated that healthy churches acting as real community centers, rather than mere houses of occasional worship, promote rural prosperity.

If it becomes impossible to buy any more blue overalls owing to the scarcity of dyes, it will constitute one more reason why a man's wife should dig out the ashes, no scarcity of apron material being reported.

Fun---Well Done

Grins.

The archbishop had preached a fine sermon on married life and its beauties. Two old Irish women were heard coming out of church commenting on the address.

"'Tis a fine sermon his reverence would be after giving us," said one to the other.

"'Tis, indeed," was the quick reply, "and I wish I knew as little about the matter as he does."

The Auto Distance.

"How far," asked the one automobilist of the other, as they met at a turn in the road, "is it from here to the next town where there's a repair shop?"

"Eleven hills, three bad bridges, one long stretch of deep sand and two arrests."

COMPANIONSHIP

By DOROTHY BLACKMORE.

Because George Keene liked Elsie Cartright very much he once asked her to take one of his favorite walks with him. This led them across the Hudson and up over the bluffs of the Palisades. It included a country dinner at the bumble home of a Jersey farmer, at which the guests sat down with the host and his family and the whole hearty meal, from stew to pie, was put upon the table at once.

Since that day Elsie had avoided him, and he had learned from the laughing lips of Peggy Arnot—who knew Elsie well—that the girl was not yet free from the effects of that day in the country.

"You should have known, George, that Elsie Cartright is the last girl who would welcome a sun-kissed nose. Don't you know that her beautiful skin is the joy of her life?" Peggy had asked merrily. "And you know Elsie was crazy about you—everyone knows it," she added.

George sniffed significantly. "So much for my best efforts at companionship with girls," he sighed.

Autumn was advancing rapidly and the wonderful reds and yellows of wood and meadow were drawing Keene to Long Island, where he spent that season. He bought his monthly ticket and began early to commute from his office to the country.

On the occasion of his earliest tramp into the woods he felt unusually lonely—more so than ever before, he told himself dimly. And then, as if to emphasize his loneliness, he chanced upon three happy picnicers building a fire over which to brew their own coffee. He observed that the girl and her mother were dressed in outing clothes and that they wore low-heeled boots and looked comfortable and happy. He thought of those absurd heels of Elsie and was glad that all women were not so silly.

"That's a bunch after my own heart," he commented mentally as he observed the father comfortably smoking as he sat on a fallen tree and watched the women of his family preparing the picnic meal.

"Doesn't this beat a dinner dance all hollow?" he heard the father ask. "No more of that regular life for me!" the girl sang merrily as she poked the fire. Then she stopped and looked at her mother. "If I could find a man I could like as well as you like father, and who cared for this sort of thing, I'd—well, I'd marry him, I believe," she said. "But, alas, these men I've known have cared more for a ripping foxglove and a good lobster supper than for this simple amusement."

Keene heard it all. And as he wandered slowly on he heard the girl scream: "Oh, dad, chaso this dog away! I hate strange dogs. He's after our dinner!"

Here was another common interest—her dislike of dogs and his—strange dogs, at least. He had heard of the companionship of canines, but had failed to see into it. He had never yet seen the dog that knew a toad-stool from a violet or a sunset from a sunrise, so he had failed to be convinced of their value as human companions.

Nevertheless the incident gave him an idea. He assured himself that he must get acquainted with that trio by fair means or foul.

His neighbor had a horribly vicious looking dog that was as gentle as a turtle dove. Two days later, accompanied by the vicious-looking canine of his neighbor, Keene strolled through the woods in which he had seen the trio of picnicers. The dog had been carefully starved during the entire day and was ravenous. All of which was exactly as Keene wished it to be. The poor beast sniffed under every bush in the hope of unearthing even an ancient bone.

Keene's heart beat fast as he approached the picnic spot. "He's a juicy steak was being grilled, and even Keene's own mouth began to water at the fragrance of it. And how that fragrance affected the hungry dog was almost beyond description, so quickly did it happen.

The dog dashed. Keene dashed after him. They both landed in the midst of a surprised trio. "He's as gentle as a lamb!" Keene kept crying. "He wouldn't bite anything!"

"No—he looks like it," Mr. Nevins managed to say as the dog made frantic efforts to get at the broiling meat. "Oh, I'm frightfully sorry," said Keene, almost as earnestly as if he had not planned it all and was tickled immoderately at the success of his ruse.

The mother and daughter stood aside and laughed long and heartily. "We really can't blame the poor thing!" said Molly.

And then followed informal introductions and, after the coveted invitation to dinner, Keene tied the dog to a tree and promised him the tags and bones of the steak, with Miss Molly's permission.

After the embers of the fire had been raked out and the quartet was strolling aimlessly about the woods, Molly ventured a remark that pleased Keene more than any simple words he had ever heard.

"I thought you would manage to know us," she said.

"Trust me to manage anything I want as badly as I did your companionship," he said.

Travelers on Shipboard Have Acquired Allment Since Telephone Came into Use.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Wireless nausea" is the newest illness on record and has only come since the wireless telephone has become an established thing. The discovery of the phenomenon was the result of travelers on shipboard becoming nauseated at sea when there was no perceptible dip to the vessels on which they were traveling.

PINNACLE ROCKS ARE MENACE TO TRADE BY WATER

Federal Department Discards Sounding for Dragging System to Root Up Obstacles.

ARE DIFFICULT TO LOCATE

A Pinnacle Rock is Like an Undersea Dagger to a Ship—Legal Importance of Having Dangerous Rocks Charted Cannot Be Overestimated.

Washington.—If an aviator flew over New York some dark night, plumbing for the Woolworth tower with an ordinary sounding line, he'd have just as much chance of locating the building as the hydrographic experts of the department of commerce have in locating pinnacle rocks from ten to thirty feet under the surface of the water by using the same method. Accordingly, the department is no longer "sounding" for pinnacle rocks: it is "dragging" for them.

Pinnacle rocks are one of the gravest menaces to navigation that exist in the coastal waters of the United States. New England has the most abundant crop of any locality and the coast of that section is probably the hardest to chart of any American coast. With the new "drag" method in operation, however, charting of pinnacle rocks is becoming an easy matter.

Not only is a pinnacle rock extremely dangerous to navigation, but it is extremely difficult to locate. A pinnacle rock is exactly what its name implies. It is a tall, rocky pinnacle which rises straight from the bottom of the ocean and often the area of its top surface would not be ten square yards. When a vessel strikes one, though, a pinnacle rock is like nothing so much as an undersea dagger.

Speed Was the Thing

Years ago, when the coasts of the United States were first charted, it was necessary to make as much speed as possible and cover the greatest possible territory in the shortest possible time. "Dragging" indicated the plumbing of coastal localities with a sounding line and the determination of shoals by consideration of the general characteristics of the locality were necessary, but these surveys left many uncharted pinnacles behind, to bring disaster to ships later on.

They tell a story of a pinnacle rock incident that occurred on one of Peary's trips to Greenland, back in the late nineties. Peary's ship was holding a straight course for Greenland, but owing to the cloudiness of the weather a lookout was posted. The routine of the ship was suddenly disturbed by the cry of the lookout: "Breakers dead ahead!" The helmsman spun his wheel and the ship heeled sharply to port, just in time to escape a sunken rock which was about three feet under water. Had it not been for the lookout Peary might never have reached the pole.

The department of commerce has been aware for a long time of the lack of authentic charts of many portions of the American coast, and the danger of pinnacle rocks was the real reason why the old plumline system was discarded for the wire-drag method, which is very much similar to the old-fashioned seine.

A line is run between two motor boats, several hundred yards apart. This line is supported on the water by floats, but suspended from it are other lines, all attached to a long wire, under water, which is held down by weights. The wire under water corresponds exactly to the lower edge of a seine.

Motor Boats Active

The motor boats are started forward, keeping an even distance apart. The bottom wire is far enough under water to intercept anything which would rise high enough from the bottom to be a navigation danger, and as long as the floats on the surface drag along without going under the motor boats chug away on their course.

But at the first dip of the floats, anywhere along the surface line, the motor boats stop, for the disappearance of the floats indicates the wire under water has struck a snag. If the snag is found to be a rock, its distance from the surface is ascertained and its location immediately charted. Then the wire is disengaged, the motor boats are started again and the department "snag fishers" are off after another "catch."

The department, in a bulletin recently issued, admits that the most certain way to locate a pinnacle rock is to let a ship strike one. This effort, however, is admittedly dangerous to passengers and extremely expensive to the owners of the boat, particularly if the rock is struck at night. In floats, but suspended from it are other lines, all attached to a long wire, under water, which is held down by weights. The wire under water corresponds exactly to the lower edge of a seine.

those days and there were not so many lines of coastwise steamers running. These coast steamers have a regular course up and down the coast, and they hold to their course so true that they may pass a pinnacle rock at very close quarters for years without knowing of its existence.

Wire-Drags System. The new wire-drag system is the only system which will definitely and certainly establish the danger or freedom of a certain marine locality for ships. The legal importance of having all dangerous rocks noted on government charts cannot be overestimated. The chart is very often the means of fixing responsibility for a marine disaster, either in merchant service or in the navy. The captain, accused of negligence in the navigation of his vessel after having struck an obstruction of some kind, may plead that the obstruction was not noted on the chart.

This is particularly true when the vessel succeeds in getting off before the locality can be definitely ascertained and the statements of the captain verified or disproved. As the whole purpose of licensing navigators is to make marine travel safe for passengers and property, it is essential that the plea of uncharted rocks be made as untenable as possible.

The cost of wire-drag work, considering the value of the results obtained, is not regarded as excessive. The cost of dragging the New England coast ranges anywhere from $125 to $175 per square mile, while the work of charting the waters of Florida in the vicinity of Key West runs much higher. Here it costs from $450 to $600 a square mile.

MAY SOLVE OLD MYSTERY

Teeth Lead to Identification of Farmer Who Disappeared Eight Years Ago.

Oklahoma City.—The finding of the skeleton of a man in a ravine near Britton, a few miles north of this city, may solve the mystery of the disappearance eight years ago of W. W. Crabtree, a farmer of that community.

Nothing but the bare bones remain of the body. The skeleton shows a perfect set of teeth, a fact which led acquaintances to identify the skeleton as that of Crabtree.

On the skull was a dent, probably made by some blunt instrument. Near the plow on which he had been working, when the first search was made, was found a monkey wrench.

Crabtree was a successful farmer and lived alone. Little was known of the man at the time he settled on the farm. It was understood that he had come from Oregon, though he never talked of himself.

TALK OF BABIES JARS THEM

Spinsters Form Club in Kansas Town to Avoid Chatter About Husbands.

Sabetha, Kan.—An organization of spinsters has been formed in this town to save them from hearing talk about babies.

"At the women's clubs," says Miss Georgia Hook, head of the spinsters, "all we hear is talk of babies and husbands of various kinds. Oh, you can't realize the unintentional cruelty of it all! What pleasure can we have in hearing talk of babies, babies, babies all the time? The small town never gives the proper chance for all girls to marry happily. Too many of our best young men go to the cities. As a result there are more marriageable young women than young men."

KY COUPLE

At Detroit—Scribe's Instinct and Feminine Curiosity Lead To Arrest. Feminine curiosity, always a dangerous element since the days of Pandora, led Flora Mullen, 32 years old, and Roland Riney, 33, of Cynthiana, Ky., to cells in the Wayne county jail. Coupled with Mrs. Mullen's curiosity, another cause of the abrupt end to the Mullen-Riney romance was the detective instinct in newspaper men the world over. Mrs. Mullen, who is alleged to have shipped with Riney from Cynthiana early in September, could not restrain a desire to learn what the home town papers had to say about the elopement. As she had left her husband and Riney had left his wife and a child of 3 years, according to the police, she thought it quite possible that there might be some comment in the Log Cabin and the Democrat, both published in Cynthiana. She wrote a note asking that copies of certain dates be sent to Detroit. Some scribe on one of the weeklies felt a thump on his detective instinct when the letter arrived. He wondered what anybody in Detroit wanted with the Log Cabin or the Democrat of those dates. He obtained a specimen of the handwriting of Mrs. Mullen, compared it with that on the request for the papers, and the mystery was solved. Detectives of the Detroit bureau received a request to arrest the alleged elopers and the above mentioned circumstances were mentioned. The couple were charged with a statutory offense under the disorderly act, and waived to the recorder's court when arraigned in Police Court Friday. They are held in default of $500 each. A probable disposition of the Kentucky wife further action.

Hammons' dress caught fire from leaves which befallen from a match which she stepped after lighting her pipe sitting in a small park near. It is thought that the unconscious women dropped off to sleep not knowing that the leaves ignited. Mr. Schultz was away, but her young daughter screams of the aged woman a human torch when she saw her and threw a bucket of water. The quantity of water sufficient to extinguish the before the child could see her grandmother was so scarce that death resulted a

WHAT IS RURAL CREDIT?

(By W. W. Powell, Former Secretary of the Wisconsin Board of Public Affairs.) Rural credit means money for the farmer. Every one understands that in a vague, indefinite sort of way. But how is the farmer to get the money he needs—on what terms, what security, what rate of interest and for what length of time? And why does the farmer need any special advantages not already provided under the present banking system? Not only are these questions to be discussed at the Third National Conference on Marketing and Farm Credits, to be held at Chicago, November 29 to December 2, but they are to be answered by the drafting of a rural credit bill to be submitted to Congress at the opening of the coming session. Then what is rural credit? To begin with, the farmer must wait upon the seasons. He can not speed the earth upon its axis or hasten it upon its course around the sun. His returns come when the seasons have run their course. He can borrow money at the bank if he has ample security, but he needs a longer time in which to repay the bank than does the merchant. The storekeeper borrows for sixty or ninety days. He turns his stock of goods in that time and can repay the bank. The farmer needs his loans for a longer period. He needs it when he puts the seed in the ground, but he is not ready to repay until the crop is grown, harvested and marketed. Do not the banks give him the accommodations he needs? Some banks in some communities do. But most banks find it more to their liking to loan money on short time, sixty or ninety-day paper. They are lending the money of their depositors. They must have their loans so arranged as to the time when they fall due and are collectable that the depositor can get his money when he asks for it. Consequently, the banker prefers to loan these funds upon short-time paper. The short-time loan makes easier banking. This limitation, inherent in present banking methods, makes it necessary to provide for an extension of the banking system. For agriculture is the great fundamental industry, and when the farmer needs money for his seasonal operations the welfare of the entire country requires that he should have it—and have it upon terms which do not lay upon him a greater burden than he can bear. European countries have met just these conditions and have worked them out to the salvation of the farmer and the benefit of all Europe. The banking system of Germany, France and Russia, of Denmark, Holland and Switzerland, of England, Scotland and Ireland, have been extended by the formation of co-operative credit associations. These co-operative societies, pledging the unlimited credit of every member, borrow of the banks and in turn reloan the money to individual farmers, many of whom are too poor and have too little security to enable them to secure even a small loan direct from the bank. But this is personal credit. The money so provided is used for farm operations. What about the man who wants to buy a farm? Europe has met and solved this problem also. Some states in this country, notably Wisconsin, have made some progress along the same line. In Wisconsin, it is possible to buy a farm and have twenty years or more in which to pay off the mortgage. The ordinary farm mortgage runs from five to ten years. And usually when it falls due, the farmer has to renew the mortgage or permit it to be foreclosed. And renewing a mortgage at a reasonable rate of interest is not an easy task, and often requires the payment of a commission to the agent who finds some one with capital to invest in the mortgage. And this is both expensive and discouraging. In Wisconsin there are several farm mortgage associations patterned after the land banks of Germany and other European countries. The land mortgage association takes a mortgage on the land, deposits the mortgage with the State Treasurer, issues bonds against the mortgage and sells the bonds to the banks. This is some red tape to be sure, but it operates to make the farm mortgage a fluid security; that is, a security easily sold. The bonds are for $100, $500, and they pass as other securities for their face value. For looking up title

RIVER NEWS

William McGuire, for many years a steward on the Ohio river packets, died Friday evening at Madison. He was 55 years old. On her last trip the new packet Peoria, of St. Louis, burned 800 bushels of soft coal screenings at 2 cents per bushel. From Peoria to St. Louis is 242 miles. She made it in twenty-four hours on a $16 coal bill, which rivermen say is quite wonderful. Two adventurous young men who are traveling in a canoe are A. N. Rust and I. N. Adams, on their way to Tampa, Fla., from New York. They left New York on August 8. They paddled up the Hudson river to Albany, and from there into the Erie canal, thence to Rochester. From Rochester they shipped their canoe to the Allegheny river. During their trip the men have been working on the government dams along the Ohio river. They will go to Tampa by way of New Orleans and the "inside route" from New Orleans along the gulf to Mobile. The Calumet, 240 feet long, thirty-eight feet beam and seven-foot hold, finished in the summer of 1868 under the supervision of Captain John H. Stewart at the Madison Marine yards, was taken to Cincinnati in the fall of that year to receive a $50,000 cargo of whiskey for southern delivery. Before the cargo was loaded the Ohio river froze, and in the break-up the boat was cut down. She completely disappeared, and in the following spring when the waters receded, the packet was found bottomside up, wedged in, along side the ways from which she had been launched. Very little of the cargo was recovered. Several attempts were made to reclaim what was left of the boat, but each proved of no avail. The skeleton of the boat can still be seen when the river is low. Very distressing reports come from Turkey, where poverty, disease and despair are prevalent. Typhus and typhoid are spreading. The wheat crop is reported good, but there is no money to buy it and there are no men left to plant the fields. Mr. Gordon Marsh, who has been spending Thanksgiving with his mother, Mrs. Mary Marsh, returned to Lexington Sunday afternoon.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH

Remarkable Statement of a Woman Who Was Nothing But Skin and Bones. Laugh and grow fat is a homely saying, but Mrs. Elizabeth L. Morris, of Hammond, La., tells of a more reliable method. She says: "I can not say enough in praise of Vinol, for it saved my life. I was weak, nervous, run-down and was nothing but skin and bones. Three doctors had all failed to help me. One day I saw Vinol advertised, took course and bought a bottle, and it soon made me feel better. I continued its use and such a change! I have regained my strength, flesh and health as perfectly well, and the doctor was surprised to see such a change in me in such a short time." Elizabeth Morris, Hammond, La. The reason Vinol proved such a wonderful strength creator in Mrs. Morris' case was because of the peptonate of iron, beef peptonate and the extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, combined in a pure native wonderful tonic. Louie wine, which makes Vinol a most Pecor Drug Company, Maysville, Ky.
